Orotta School of Medicine Graduates Fourth Round of Doctors

The Eritrean Government has made huge investment in building the infrastructure and human resources necessary for all the citizens to get accessible, affordable, efficient, effective and quality health services.

In this vein, Eritrea has established several training institutions for medical doctors, nurses, midwives, pharmacists, laboratory technicians, associate nurses, anaesthetists, public health practitioners and other paramedic specialists.

One of these institutions is the Orotta School of Medicine which was established in 2004 in Asmara.

Since then, the School has expanded its programs by establishing the School of Dental Medicine in 2007, and a Post Graduate Medical Education program in 2008. On 28 December 2013, the School graduated 56 Medical Doctors who pursued their studies for eight years.

Students at the Orotta School of Medicine and the other medical training institutions do not pay tuition, boarding or any other fees; it is fully covered by the Government.

Eritrean Natnael Berhane Wins the 2013 African Sportsman Award

Natnael Berhane is voted African Sportsman of the Year 2013 in a poll conducted by the African Top Sports website. According to the results made public on 5 January 2014, Natnael secured the award by getting a sweeping 4371 (44%) of the votes.
